BASIC-ABSTRACT:

The data-bank is constructed and addressed by a modern telephone with push buttons. The seller informs about his goods by ringing the data-bank telephone number, and describing his goods in stages with code numbers, which builds up the data bank. The telephone push buttons deliver the numbers, and the seller with the same push buttons identifies himself with another number, the telephone number for selling. Any interested party can obtain information with goods or service description, including price and the identity of the seller, by ringing the data bank telephone number for consultation purposes. Both the buyer and the seller are connected through the data-bank with the aid of synthetic speech which automatically guides both through build-up and consultation, where information levels are marked with a typical symbol on the push buttons, such as a four-sided formation resembling the musical sharp sign.

USE/ADVANTAGE - To facilitate selling and buying of second-hand capital goods and services by telephone.
